

Old-age pensions for foreign nationals: significance of nationality and impact of international law

3/34/24

Latvian law lays down different principles for including employment periods and periods equivalent to employment in the insurance period for Latvian nationals and foreign nationals, including EU nationals receiving an old-age pension. This has caused disputes between pension recipients and the National Social Insurance Agency (NSIA), as well as building the case law based on interpretations of the Latvian Constitution, EU law and international agreements.
