

Protection of business secrets in e-invoicing (2)

2/11/25

Conclusion of the article from the previous week.

The mere fact that the owner of a trade secret considers certain information to be a trade secret or recognises it internally as such is not sufficient. Section 6 of the Trade Secrets Protection Law requires the trade secret owner, when disclosing such information to a natural or legal person, to indicate which information is to be considered a trade secret and, at the same time, to inform about the need to ensure the protection of such information.
